ORIENTATION '73

Sunday, September 2 began an extensive program of both work and play for approximately 940 new students. The Freshman Orientation Committee, a Student Senate sub-committee, was responsible for the planning and execution of the program. Starting at 8 a.m. on Sunday, freshmen and transfer students were greeted by a welcoming smile from courageous F.O.C. leaders who braved the heat of the day to make sure that parking arrangements were clear.

The Koffler Rotunda served well as the new students were greeted by still other leaders, whose job it was to dispense specially prepared Freshman Orientation packages, and for the first time a special issue of the ARCHWAY was offered to help round out the picture of activities at Bryant for the new students.

Despite the fumbling of the Maintenance Department, dormitory students moved into their new homes away from home with relatively little trouble. One bystander remarked that the large red and white signs which singled out the different dormitories made the dormitory village look like "a miniature golf course made for a giant." This was just part of the effort to guide parents and students swiftly and safely to their dorms.

While the initial registration period lasted from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., the college dining service, A.R.A., treated the new students and their families to a Steamship Buffet in the Main Dining Room.

New students listen to the music of "Jack," at Tuesday's picnic in the Dorm Village.

The evening's festivities began with an address from Roy Nelson, Assistant Dean of Admissions, who spoke to a group of commuting students in the auditorium, encouraging them to get involved in their new school. Mr. Nelson also provided some helpful hints on study practices.

The gymnasium was later the scene of the official welcome. Dr. Harry F. Everts, President of the College, invited students to be a part of the Bryant College Family at this time. Among the other speakers were Dr. Nelson Galski, Acting Vice President for Academic Affairs; Dr. Barry Fullerton, Vice President for Student Affairs; and several student leaders.

The first evening hours for the new students were spent with seemingly great enjoyment as a group from New York "Thruway" kept the Koffler Rotunda hopping with the sounds of the hour. Beer was served at the most reasonable price of 25 cents per can, and within an hour and 45 minutes, 48 cases of Budweiser were consumed.

During the entire program at designated intervals F.O.C. leaders met with the new students to smooth over any rough spots in the program.

In the following days, the new students met for an academic orientation assembly, enjoyed cook-outs, and made new acquaintances as the upperclassmen returned to Bryant.

Peter Barlow -

New Assistant To Vice President For Student Affairs

One of the many new faces on the Bryant Campus is that of Mr. Peter Barlow, Assistant to Vice President Barry Fullerton of Student Affairs. Barlow is a native of Rhode Island. He attended the University of Rhode Island, taught high school for one year, graduated from Graduate School in September, 1972, and was the Assistant Dean of Students at Worcester College last August.

After a few discussions with Dr. Fullerton, Barlow decided to take the responsibility behind the Dormitory complex. He has always wanted to return to the Northeast and found this an excellent opportunity to do so.

Mr. Barlow's obligations are centered around the Residence hall area. This encompasses the Resident Assistants, Resident Directors, maintenance work, supplies, and damages that are found. He has taken the responsibility of creating a judicial system on campus but will need a lot of student input to do so. Mr. Barlow took control of the R.A. Orientation Program a few days before Freshman Orientation.

In reference to the drug situation, Mr. Barlow feels that he is not a policeman or a law enforcer. He feels that he "can't legislate morality" because "everyone is different." He stated that "where it becomes a problem, then I will intervene."

The Assistant to the Vice President for Student Affairs would like to establish procedures (that is, the proper channels) for students to get things done; and he would like to see a dorm council established to speak on behalf of the resident students.

Peter Barlow commented that the fraternities serve a definite function. He stated that it was unfortunate that they didn't have houses because with frat houses there isn't any infringement upon other people in the dorms and that frats could develop their own identity to a greater capacity.

To an extent he is sympathetic to the problems the frats face in the dorms and wished that there was floor space in all the dorms where people could meet for individual social functions.

Mr. Barlow is interested in the age-old problem of getting dorm and commuter students together and hopes for maximum student involvement.

Editorially Speaking

Freshmen Orientation

Those who said "it couldn't be done," were eating their words as soon as the first freshmen arrived on campus and were put into the able hands of the Freshmen Orientation Committee. This committee of four students, with the assistance of about 40 student orientation leaders, staged one of the most successful events ever to take place at Bryant College.

Another factor contributing to the success was the complete backing of Dr. Fullerton, who was behind the Committee all the way—even when most other administrators had turned their thumbs down, saying that the Orientation project was just too involved.

We hope that this success has convinced certain people that it is time to get out of the "Conservative Rut," try some new ideas, and maybe even advance this area to at least an equal level with other schools. We also hope that next year's committee will again have a free hand in organizing more programs of which the entire Bryant Community can be proud.

Thanks For A Job Well Done

Dear Editor,

Now that much of the dust has settled from a busy four days, the Freshmen Orientation Coordinating Committee would like to publicly thank the following people.

If it had not been for the faith that was displayed by the entire staff of the Office of Student Affairs, the program might not have been as successful. Moreover, to Mrs. Eleanor Jacquard and Mrs. Peggy Quintin go out most sincere thanks for allowing us the freedom of movement necessary and the unlimited assistance we were given.

We thank Peter Habbitt and the congenious group of people from A.R.A. who braved skyrocketing temperatures to make sure that our new students food needs were handled.

We thank Ms. Mary Lyons and Mr. Roy Nelson who served as advisors in making important decisions.

We thank Chief Robert Gardner, Director of Security, and his crew of dedicated men and women for their concern in our plight to greet with warmth and understanding the new students and their families.

A special tip of the hat to Mr. Robert Hathaway and Mr. John Hannon.

We hope that we have not forgotten anyone, and for all the people whose praises may go unsung, you may rest assured that you will be well remembered.

There is one group of people who made the Freshmen Orientation program work. The Coordinating Committee congratulates and expresses our most heartfelt thanks to 40 of the best people Bryant has to offer. Had it not been for their devoted concern, Freshmen Orientation '73 would not have been as successful as it was. Again, rest assured that your performance has insured the future of student-operated functions of a large-scale nature in the years to come.

Coordinating Committee

A Letter of Thanks

Dear Editor,

Freshmen Orientation 1973 has now come and gone. Most students will never know the effort and work that made this orientation such a SUCCESS! I would like to publicly thank the members of the Freshmen Orientation Coordination Committee: Margaret French, Tim Banning, Richard Woolf, and Shelley Weinstein; the 40 Freshmen Orientation Leaders and the special orientation staff of the ARCHWAY for the job they did.

Sincerely,
Gregory Evans

Executive Praise

Dear Editor,

I want to take this opportunity to express my gratitude to the students who served as members of the Student Orientation Committee during the past few days. In short, their performance was outstanding. In particular, I want to acknowledge the work of Margaret French, Shelley Weinstein, Tim Banning, and Rich Woolf, the coordinators of the Committee.

Almost everyone here at Bryant College agrees that this past Orientation was the most successful in the College's recent history. The success of this year's program reflects favorably and only upon the forty or more students who organized and conducted the program, but also upon the entire Bryant College student body.

I also want to express my thanks to the members of the faculty, the administration, and the staff for their cooperation and help with this year's Orientation Program. It is this kind of cooperative effort that will make Bryant the outstanding institution of higher education that we all want it to be.

redrO fo tuO

This week, The ARCHWAY wishes to extend congratulations to the management of the Bryant College Book Store for its excellent planning of hours to distribute books in the basement of the Unistrukture. It was an excellent idea to close from 12 Noon to 1 p.m.—when there are no scheduled classes on Tuesdays and Thursdays. This is also the time when it is most convenient for most of our commuters, secretarial majors, and students with afternoon jobs to buy their textbooks. But closing during this hour does avoid the confusion of a mass rush in the bookstore and also makes things a little easier and a lot less work for bookstore employees. Once again, congratulations to whoever is responsible for this oversight.

Shortnotes : The Music Column

Alice Cooper, the all-American boy. He is 24 years old. He likes to watch television and drink beer and go to baseball games.

Alice Cooper is the biggest name in American rock music in 1973. His albums sell millions of copies, and hundreds of thousands of people jam sports arenas across the country to see his extravagant acts of sex and violence set to music.

Some excerpts from a recent conversation:

On his audiences, he says: "I'm up for a reaction, on some level they can throw up, they can laugh, they can leave as long as they don't just sit there. The worst audience you can get is intellectuals. I want the 16-year-old kids."

On his song topics, Cooper has this to say: "I just think sex and violence is more fun than ecology. There's nothing wrong with human blood-lust. I can't think of anything that should be taken too seriously."

On what it all means: "This is the 1970's cabaret—we're just re-exploiting decadence. The Germans invented the cabaret out of decadence, and that's what we're doing."

Alice is clearly a child of television. Put him in front of a relatively intimate audience, without eye makeup or props, and he becomes a long-haired Johnny Carson who tells sick jokes and always has a witty comeback. Closer still, in direct conversation, he is lucid and a clear-headed self-analyst.

But it is not really this "off-stage" Alice who counts. It's the extant, sneering, rock star Alice who sells all those tickets and records.

On stage, Alice's perceptions of the direction rock music and theater are going—combined with the jaded attitude of his audiences have led to musical sexual fantasies and violent excesses—chopped-up dolls and dismembered mannequins, hangups, gangs, gun fights, and beheadings.

Yet in many ways, Alice should be easier for America to understand, if not embrace, than the purposefully non-theatrical bands of the 60's. In Cooper's words, "I believe in gimmicks—I would hate to go up on stage in a pair of levis and just play rock 'n' roll—that's old, and stupid."

It is the classic Hollywood formula, the formula which produced the James Bond movies, as well as "Shaft" and its imitators. Certainly Alice exploits sexual guilt and inhibitions no more than the average sex-rated film. And no matter how they try, Alice's special effects crew will never match the gore in most popular horror movies.

It is not so much what Alice Cooper does, but the fact that he does it live, right there in front of you, which shocks people and which makes him new, different, and therefore successful.

As for the music, it almost seems silly to comment, since "Billion Dollar Babies" has already been certified a platinum album, which means it has sold more than a million copies.

Nonetheless, I'll defy popular opinion and say that despite some fine hard rockers ("Elected," "No More Mr. Nice Guy," and "Billion Dollar Babies," featuring Donovan trading lead vocals with Alice, plus the brief, whimsical and out-of-character "Mary Ann"), Alice Cooper's best album is still "Killer." In fact, "Killer" remains one of the best hard rock albums ever released by anybody.

Though insisting, predictably, that "Babies" is the best Cooper album yet, Alice modestly concedes that "We haven't made a 'Sgt. Pepper' yet, but that's what we're going for. We're very competitive people."

Like it or not, Alice Cooper is an American as apple pie. U.P.I., 9/7/73.

FRESHMEN ORIENT

The cool shade offered by trees at the edge of the dormitory village protected hungry music lovers as the afternoon wore on.

Incoming students and their families were in the main dining hall as guests of Bryant, who performed in their admirable fashion.

Budweiser played an important part in easing the strain of making friends during the freshmen mixer held in Koffler Rotunda. New students share in a sense of accomplishment as their peers purchase approximately 1152 cans of beer in an unofficial 105 minute record.

A bird's eye view reveals Koffler Rotunda as a beehive of activity. Parents, in the air-conditioned comfort of the Unistructure, F.O.C. leaders functioned as a hub for assorted activities. Although many had a limited amount of free time, they chose

"My Name's Friday, I Carried A Badge"

It all began with "Dragnet" back in 1952, and since then Jack Webb has become the most prolific single producer of television series.

Concentrating as he did in the beginning on the Los Angeles Police Department, Webb's shows are "Adam-12," "Emergency," "Hec Ramsey," "Kaspar," and a new pilot called "Chase."

The crewcut, mud-faced actor-producer played Sergeant Joe Friday in "Dragnet," but today he's content to work behind the camera at Universal.

Webb's office is crammed with testimonials to his talents from police departments far and wide. One whole cabinet is filled with badges and shields—gifts from various constabularies.

In his rapid-fire, flat voice, Webb told U.P.I.'s Vernon Scott:

"Police shows go back to the basics. Television runs in phases. But this cop trend may last longer than others because viewers feel a sense of security seeing hoodlums arrested."

At 53, Jack Webb isn't uptight if one of his shows doesn't make it to the network. He refuses to weep if a show is cancelled. And he's not worried either about the competition that inevitably crops up at times in police dramas.

"Under the best conditions," he said, "it's difficult to come up with different stories on a police series. But I suppose the same is true of westerns or medical shows."

He fired up another cigarette and grinned. "I'm not complaining. Competition is good for us." U.P.I. 9/7/73

Changes Around Bryant

Building News

Space for additional suites to house 42 more men and women students has been effected in the dormitories. This brings the College Dormitory population to 1,162.

Construction of a Town House complex that will house 200 students has already begun. These Town Houses will occupy a site on the campus directly off the College's entrance road. Each of the 50 apartments will accommodate four students and each student will have a bedroom of his own. The new complex is beautifully located in a lush woodland setting near the Dormitory Village and all the other College buildings. They will be ready for occupancy in September, 1974.

Squeaky Springs and Other Country Comforts

There's a big little spot here on campus that might be for you. The Coffee House is many things for many people and maybe some of them are for you. We offer a space, something other than four concrete walls, and we're stronger than dirt. Sometimes we're quiet and sometimes we're not, but we're always thinking. We're comfortable and healthy and want to be someplace else for you. We have live music every Friday and Saturday nights, and we offer you a place to play during the week.

We want to help you help yourself. Now is our time and yours. Being here is a feeling; not a rabbit. Growth comes in many colors and experience is the glue that holds it all together. We all journey out, in search for the bow or the stern, or to walk & get to face in each other. Hope to see you soon.

FRIDAY NIGHT AT 9 p.m. WE'RE HAVING A PARTY. Drop down and enjoy a little Country Comfort!

The Unistructure has also been changed a little bit for the 1973-74 school year. A game room has been added in the recreation area to give additional space for these activities. Also, a College Candy Store, carrying sweets and snacks will be opening on the ground level.

This year, the Bryant College Evening Division will present four undergraduate courses in Portsmouth, Rhode Island at the Raytheon Plant beginning on September 10. These courses are open to the community as well as to employees of the Raytheon Company.

These undergraduate courses are being presented for the first time. They are additional to the successful Bryant MBA graduate courses now being presented for the third year at the Raytheon plant. Instructors are regular members of the Bryant Faculty who come to teach from the main campus in Smithfield, Rhode Island.

UPI Broadcast Special "The Invisible Man"

A report on the new cop—"The Invisible Man."

The witness before the House Select Committee on Crime wore a full beard, long hair, tattered jeans, a ragged military coat, a floppy denim hat, and torn sneakers.

If the members of the Committee thought tall, rugged Leroy Collier looked like a hippie, that was just fine with him.

Actually, Collier and his partner Carl Garritani, who was dressed the same way, are New York City policemen. They are members of the city's anti-crime section which was described by New York Police Commissioner Patrick Murphy as "our most successful new program to combat street crime."

The Committee was holding its opening day of hearings on street crime.

A Committee counsel asked Collier: "Does this kind of undercover program work?"

The undercover cop said: "Many times I've been approached by prospective muggers to join them in mugging someone else."

According to Murphy the unit represents just over three percent of the 30,000-member force but it made 16 percent of the arrests made in New York.

In major crime categories, the force made 22 percent of the city's felony arrests last year; and has a conviction rate of 73 percent, high above average.

The Force uses a wide variety of disguises: one might be a woman riding a horse in Central Park, another might pose as a wheelchair "victim" in the Bronx, a businessman in dark suit with an attaché case in Manhattan, or a cab driver in Brooklyn. All are "covers" used by the Police.

"There are two techniques," Murphy said. "The first is to blend into the street scene, as a hippie, a doctor, a student or a nurse."

The second is as a decoy, to replace the intended victim the criminal is looking for."

Altogether, New York City has 1,000 policemen in the unit, most of them on the street during the high crime hours between 4 p.m. and midnight.

Garritani told the Committee: "It's a lot more dangerous than when I was a foot patrolman. There is considerable potential for danger because we try and have the crime perpetrated on ourselves."

But Murphy said while the men are exposed to danger, none was shot last year; and only one received a minor stab wound.

Murphy described the reasoning behind creation of his special unit. In his words:

"The public's reaction to crime is most often to 'get more policemen on the beat.' One effective way to use the policeman on the 'beat' is to make him invisible."

ALTERNATIVE FEATURES SERVICE

To All Prospective Baseball Candidates

The school year is upon us and so is fall baseball. This is a note to inform you of developments and plans for the fall. The program will run from September 10 to October 6 but possibly a week longer if some other schools express interest in playing. The initial workout will be run exactly like a tryout camp and the team will be selected from these people unless circumstances prohibit your participation. These cases must be discussed with me personally. Following that week will be a THOROUGH review of fundamentals and a series of games with several local teams.

All candidates should be in shape and ready to play. Freshmen are eligible for Varsity competition and I have the belief that the best players will play regardless of what class they are in. We are looking for an outstanding season with the prospects of many outstanding newcomers.

Candidates must bring spikes, gloves, sweat pants, sweat shirts, and towel. Pitchers should bring a wind breaker. Report to the field at 3:30 September 10 dressed and ready to go. If you have a late class come as soon as class is over.

I am pleased to announce the appointment of Ray Jarvis as assistant baseball coach. Ray will add much in experience and knowledge gained while pitching in the Major Leagues with the Boston Red Sox and California Angels. Both Ray and I hope your summer has been enjoyable, and we are looking forward to seeing you September 10.

Sincerely,
Steve Thornton

The Bryant College Table Tennis Team will take to the courts as the second year of intercollegiate competition commences shortly. The team is comprised by five solid and experienced starters with two substitutes used as relief men. They are Captain Larry Ostrower, Co-captain Howard Schreiber, Lawrence Selvin, Howie Dornfeld and Neil Goldman.

The selection of new players will primarily be coordinated by the team's two captains. The site of weekly play takes place at the Providence Table Tennis Club, 741 Westminster Street. Bryant was the runner-up team in the six-team leagues last season composing a 7-3 won-lost record.

The team wishes to expand the quantity of quality players; for the goal of this year's squad is to capture the league championship. Any person who is interested in playing on the team is urged to try out before our present members.

Lucky Luciano

In show business with UPI. Today, a special report from Peggy Polk in Rome.

As a U.S. Narcotics Agent, Charles Siragusa spent more than 20 years trying to send Lucky Luciano to prison, but the mobster eluded him--first by deportation, then by death.

Now Siragusa is getting a chance in Rome to present his evidence against Luciano on a movie screen instead of incourtroom.

Siragusa--who was a narcotics agent from 1939 until 1963, when he became Executive Director of the Illinois Investigation Commission--is playing himself in the movie, "RE: Lucky Luciano."

A short, grey-haired man of 59 who wears glasses and talks with traces of his native Bronx, Siragusa makes no claim to being an actor. He said in a UPI interview he decided to appear in the movie because he believes it will help to strip Luciano's memory of its false glamor.

Siragusa said Luciano was the "arch-criminal of the century." He went on to say: "you hear stories about all the good things he did, about how he helped the Allies in World War II by making contact with the Mafia in Sicily--but they're all lies.

In Siragusa's words: "He was a cutthroat, a ruthless gangster, a big dope peddler. I detested the man."

In casting Siragusa in the movie, Italian Director Francesco Rosi got a technical adviser as well as an actor. Siragusa--who took a vacation from the crime commission in Chicago for the filming--made sure events were accurate and the dialogue authentic.

Unlike fellow stars Gian Maria Volonte, who plays Luciano, and Rod Steiger, who plays informer Gene Giannini--Siragusa has no lines to memorize, just cues. He acts his scenes as he remembers them.

His memories go back to 1940 when as a young narcotics agent he began his long duel with Luciano. From the start he took a personal interest in the New York vice czar.

Like Luciano, Siragusa is a Sicilian, and he was as intense about being a federal agent and pinching his man as Luciano was about being a gangster. Both of Siragusa's parents were born in Sicily.

The Grandstand View

by Peter Lockatell

It was such a short time ago that I finished my sports writing for another summer. (Many Bryant students breathed a sigh of relief at that point!) Now to some of my readers' dismay, I have returned to write more nonsense for this paper's sports section. At times there are few sports highlights to focus on, but the summer certainly had its share.

As soon as I left this hallowed institution for my summer's tour of work, I already had the outcomes of the "Indy 500" and the Triple Crown. After a maze of serious accidents and delaying rainstorms, a driver by the name of Gordon Johncock was determined the winner. Even though the race was run some three months ago, the drivers and USAC officials are still fighting his creditors for the rights to his winnings.

In a slower form of racing, there wasn't much doubt as to the winner of thoroughbred horse racing's Triple Crown. Secretariat, otherwise known as "Super Red", broke a jinx that had existed for some three decades. Not since the post-war days of Citation, has a three-year-old colt been able to win the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and the Belmont Stakes. (All three jewels of the Triple Crown) Not only did "Super Red" win the Triple Crown, but he set track records that will be around for awhile!

In the world of baseball, two superstars--one in each league--were trying to achieve historic baseball milestones. The Atlanta Brave's "Hammerin'" Hank Aaron is rapidly closing in on Babe Ruth's all-time mark of 714 career home runs. At last count, Henry had polled a whopping total of 708. Quick and accurate arithmetic shows the Atlanta resident to be just six short of the magic number. With twenty games left to play, when will the moment come, this year or next?

On the other hand, every sportswriter in US was computing a possibility (that's only a possibility!) of Wilbur Wood winning 40 games this season! The Chicago White Sox knuckleballer under the guise of pitching coach Johnny Sain, was pitching and winning ballgames every three days. By June, Wood had notched 15 wins, and time was ripe for incredible baseball accomplishment.

Unfortunately for Wood and Chicago, the White Sox forgot how to hit and play defense and Wilbur forgot how to pitch. I imagine Dick Allen finally feels he's wanted.

It looks like Duane Thomas has found a home in Washington. Head Coach George Allen has a classic case for his football journal of reformed drunks, senior citizens and invalids. I say the man has found a place of employment after a recent incident in Buffalo. Someone in the stands hit the "Great One" in the noggin with an empty beer can, and Thomas proceeded to attack the guilty party in the stands. The Redskins helped out on the play, so I imagine Washington must be one happy family.

Yes, much has happened, and much will be happening in that Wide World of Sports, and I will be glad to bring you my opinions and observations for the coming year.

Attention Sports Fans:

Are you a little short of spending money? Don't have that five bucks for that football ticket? The Athletic Department currently has three paying positions open for student trainers. So if your wallet feels a little light, why not truck over to the Athletic Department (second floor, gymnasium) for an interview.

The Athletic Department is also in need for managers and scorekeepers for hockey, soccer, baseball, track and basketball. If you like to be in the middle of the college sports scene, this is the opportunity for you.

Also, the Athletic Department would like to define gymnasium hours. The Bryant gym will be available for student use Monday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. and Sundays 12 noon to 10 p.m.

The varsity swimming team and diving team (Both men and women) will meet on Thursday afternoon, September 13th at 3:30 at the pool.
